

Author and Artist: Sheridan Oakes

If you happen to walk on the 400 block of Sierra Point Rd., you may have noticed a nicely-crafted wooden structure sitting atop the fence outside 421 Sierra Point Rd. This little structure is actually a lending library that Brisbane resident Sheridan Oakes has set up for Brisbane authors to share their work with their neighbors. Unaware that the City maintains a Brisbane Authors Collection, which is available to view at the Library on the shelf outside the History Room, Sheridan recently reached out to the City via our website Contact Form, found at brisbaneca.org/contact, to tell us about his lending library. We told him how the books, pamphlets, magazines, and published essays that make up the Brisbane Authors Collection are available for reference at the Library, upon which he promptly donated a copy of his book. Because his primary goal is to help the wider Brisbane community know about the published works of their fellow Brisbane residents, and how he's inviting anyone to come check out the works inside the Brisbane Authors Lending Library! We were intrigued and wanted to learn more...

STAR: How did you come up with the idea to make a Brisbane Authors Lending Library and what's the protocol?

SO: As with many independently published authors, once I had exhausted my supply of friends, colleagues, and unfortunate bystanders, I began to think about other ways to get my book out in the world. The "Little Free Library" concept looked to be a good way to offer people a chance to see what I had created without having to shell out for an unknow. That idea evolved into making a lending library for other Brisbane authors to share. This is one of the beauties of living in a small community. I like to call it the "Brisbane Authors' Lending Library" (BALL). The concept is to read the works that have been placed in the box, and then like a ball, the books/published works bounce back for others to read. If you like what you've read, and would like to own it, most publications are available online or from the author.

STAR: What inspired your latest work?

SO: My first published book is called "Tomb on the Hill". I came up with the idea twenty years ago when I saw an article in The Chronicle about a mausoleum for sale in the East Bay. I wondered what the people buried there would think of the deal. In the deceased's lifetime it had been planned for their remains to remain in the family tomb. An eviction after losing one's voice did not seem very polite. I thought about what the living owed to the dead. The subject lent itself to being both funny and poignant. The question arises: Because the dead can't stand up for themselves, do we no longer hold a commitment to them?

STAR: What do you do for fun besides writing?

SO: As with many artists, I have many creative outlets. I started playing bass guitar in the early 70s, creating music and a lot of noise with a succession of bands over the decades. At the same time, I began carving wooden sculptures, many of which are on my Housing Resources Are Available!

Did you know you can find housing resources on the City's website?

In May of this year, the City of Brisbane became one of just two cities in San Mateo County that received certification of its 2023-2031 Housing Element from the California Department of Housing and Community Development. While that was a significant milestone, it only marks the beginning of our shared housing story here in Brisbane for this eightyyear Housing Element planning period.

The Housing Element includes a number of housing programs, ranging from those aimed at facilitating the development of new housing to improving our communication to the community on the various resources and opportunities that are already available. One of the first programs is the creation of a new webpage to share housing resources for tenants, homeowners, and landlords in Brisbane. Housing resources may now be found on brisbaneca.org/housing_resources or by scanning this QR code:

Resources included on this webpage are:

- Fair housing resources for tenants and landlords, including:
 - Legal and mediation services; and
 - How to report unsafe living conditions and/or discrimination
- How to find affordable housing
- Healthy homes information
- Rental unit habitability
- Housing rehabilitation and repair programs
- How to connect to senior housing
- Tenant and landlord relations
- Emergency housing and human services
- ...and more!

We will continue to update this webpage over time, so we encourage you to check back. If you have questions, or need more information about any of these topics, or other housing topics or concerns that aren't yet covered, please reach out to the Community Development Department.

The Community Development Department's Contact Form is: brisbaneca.org/CD-Contact-Form. You may also call staff at City Hall at (415) 508-2120 or mail your questions or comments to: Community Development Department, City of Brisbane, 50 Park Place, Brisbane, CA 94005

TRASH TALK – Handling Large Items and Overflow

By: Teresa Montgomery, Sustainability Manager at SSF Scavenger, and Adrienne Etherton, Sustainability Manager at the City of Brisbane

Everyone can help keep our community clean by disposing of unwanted items responsibly. Sorting waste items into the correct cart is essential – so is keeping your cart lids fully closed. Do you know how to dispose of large items and overflow correctly? Please take the following quiz to find out:

1. Large items like sofas, desks, exercise machines, major appliances (refrigerators, washers, dryers, dishwashers), children’s play equipment (outdoor slides, playhouses, wagons), and other items that will not fit or are not allowed in your waste carts:

- A. Can often be sold or donated if in good condition. Nextdoor and Facebook are two of many possible places to post online; Goodwill and The Salvation Army are two of many possible charities that might be able to assist.
- B. Can be picked up by SSF Scavenger through the On-Call Cleanup Program or via special collection. An appointment is required. Fees may apply.
- C. Can be self-hauled to Blue Line Transfer. Fees will apply.
- D. All of the above.

2. Overflow garbage:

- A. Can be bagged, set next to your grey garbage cart, and collected on your regular collection day. An appointment is required. Extra bag fees apply.
- B. Can be picked up by SSF Scavenger through the On-Call Cleanup Program. No charge to eligible residents. Limits apply.
- C. Can be self-hauled to Blue Line Transfer. Fees will apply.
- D. All of the above.

3. Overflow recycling:

- A. Can be placed in paper bags, set next to your blue recycling cart, and collected on your regular collection day. Clean/dry paper must be bagged separately from empty recyclable containers. Cardboard should be flattened and bundled; no need to bag. No appointment is necessary. Collection is free of charge.
- B. Can be picked up by SSF Scavenger through the On-Call Cleanup Program.
- C. Can be self-hauled to Blue Line Transfer. Fees will apply.
- D. A and C only.

4. Overflow yard waste:

- A. Can be placed in paper bags, boxes, or reusable cans, set next to your green organics cart, and collected on your regular collection day. No prior arrangement is necessary. Collection is free of charge.
- B. Can be picked up by SSF Scavenger through the On-Call Cleanup Program.
- C. Can be self-hauled to Blue Line Transfer. Fees will apply.
- D. A and C only.

Answers:

- 1. D. All of the above.
- 2. D. All of the above.
- 3. D. A and C only. The On-Call Cleanup is not for materials that belong in your blue and green carts.
- 4. D. A and C only. The On-Call Cleanup is not for materials that belong in your blue and green carts.

The Cart Family has their limits.

I'm way too full!

Please do not overload or stuff large items into your waste collection carts. Doing so can create a mess and cause service delays. Call 650.589.4020 to arrange for a special collection or, bring your items to Blue Line Transfer. Charges may apply.

Caring for Our Urban Forest

By: Michele Salmon, Open Space & Ecology Committee Member

With climate change and extreme weather events, it is more important than ever to take very good care of our urban forest. Mature trees provide valuable habitat, can increase property values, sequester carbon, and help to lower the temperature in urban areas. Brisbane's tree canopy, both public and privately owned, has taken a beating these last few years.

After three years of little rain, many of Brisbane's natural springs slowed or dried up completely during the long, hot summer months. When the soil becomes extremely dry, root systems shrink, and the tree's ability to absorb water decreases. Also, harder and drier soil makes it challenging for the tree to get necessary oxygen via the roots.

For a tree to be healthy and balanced, the surface area of the roots should be approximately the same as the surface area above the ground when a tree is fully leafed out. You may have noticed that many trees during the drought were not as leafy and lost their leaves earlier than normal. When a tree's overall vitality is lessened, it becomes more susceptible to insects and disease, thus compounding tree health problems.

Then came last winter! Unprecedented torrential rains, flooding, landslides, and high winds slammed Brisbane with storm after storm, from December well into the late spring.

Rains encouraged a heavy growth above ground while the diminished roots just could not keep up. Lush leafy growth, combined with water weight in the canopies and battering by heavy winds, was more than many trees' roots could support, resulting in downed trees and a flurry of cautionary tree removals.

The wet winter also encouraged heavy ivy growth, one of the most destructive enemies of trees. Ivy loves to climb trees, but in doing so, the pervasive roots penetrate the bark, eventually choking even the largest trees to death. Home insurance companies, fearing wildfires, are driving even more tree removals.

What Can You Do to Help? Healthy trees that are well-taken care of are the best defense against both wildland fires and toppling in high wind. It can take more than 30 years to replace the canopy of a large tree.

Make sure that even your mature trees are well-watered during dry periods. If you can, help water street trees near you. These trees belong to all of us and are very costly to replace.

1. Clear all ivy off tree trunks and around the bases of trees. Help with public trees as well, and ask elderly neighbors if they need help. If you cannot reach all the ivy, at least cut the ivy all the way around the base of a tree to stop the ivy growth. Try not to damage the tree bark. Keeping ivy off trees requires vigilance.
2. If a tree is outgrowing its space, consult a trained arborist and have it professionally trimmed. Improper pruning can damage or outright kill your trees.

Please remember that most tree removals in Brisbane on private property require a tree removal permit, as does severe trimming (removing 50% or more of the foliage crown or 30% or more of the height). For more info, see: brisbaneca.org/tree-removal-landscaping. Removing trees without a permit can result in fines. When in doubt, please contact the Community Development Department at brisbaneca.org/CD-Contact-Form or call staff at (415) 508-2120. Submit a service request for street trees or trees on public property through My Brisbane, or for more questions, call Public Works at (415) 508-2130. And if City Hall is closed and you see or suspect illegal tree removal, please immediately call BPD's non-emergency number, (415) 467-1212.

In our changing environment, healthy mature trees are important as an environmental buffer and for our own well-being, too. Thank you for your help in protecting our urban forest!

artist's website, Sheridanoakesart.com. There you will also find my paintings, music, photography, metal sculptures, and the cover for my next book. I'm not all that prolific, I'm just old.

STAR: Ha ha, that's funny. How can readers learn more about you?

SO: My art background led me into working in the world of "Tribal Art" as a stand maker, which I'm still self-unemployed in. My business is called "Other Options Design".

I don't limit myself strictly to making stand for tribal art. I also create mounts for pieces that range from found objects to fine art so they can be displayed on tables, shelves, or walls.

Of course, I couldn't stop at basing art. Along with my partner, Callie, we have curated a retail art gallery called "Morgan Oakes Gallery". We are currently preparing to move our brick-and-mortar location, but there's much to look at on our website, Morganoakesgallery.com. Owning a gallery is a great excuse for buying art. So much art, so few walls...

Final thoughts from Sheridan: There is so much talent in the world and Brisbane has its share. Large corporations tend to dictate what we get to see. But there is so much more. The Brisbane Lending Library brings it home.

And there you have it. Thank you, Sheridan, for creating the Brisbane Authors Lending Library and giving local authors a positive outlet in which to share their work. And if you'd like to donate your book or publication to the Brisbane Authors Collection, please reach out to: history@brisbaneca.org.

Remembering Two Faithful Community Members

The City of Brisbane and the Brisbane Lions Club have lost two extraordinary gentlemen. Dan Sorrentino and Walt Long could be seen volunteering at many community festivals such as Day in the Park and the Festival of Lights, with Dan actually being named the City's Volunteer of the Year in 2013 (brisbaneca.org/voy) and Walt being the lead ham radio operator in the County. It was a sad call for Fire as well as PD in late June when they responded to a welfare check for Walt and found he had passed; indications are the death was due to natural causes. Service information will be shared on the signboards and our social media when we learn more. Dan's service on June 25th drew what looked like the entire town; it was standing room only as speakers recounted his strong work ethic, love for family, and volunteerism. Rest in peace, and power, gentlemen. Your service to the City and to the Brisbane community will not be soon forgotten.

New SFO Aircraft Noise Office Website

The SFO Aircraft Noise Office has a new and improved website which has a Noise and Flight Tracker that allows you to see all arriving and departing planes; if you wanted to submit a noise complaint about a specific aircraft, you can click on the comment icon. See the new site at: noise.flysfo.com

Note: there are times that aircraft need to “use reverse flow operations” - this is not uncommon during the spring through the late summer months with the winds. In fact, if you hear on the local weather report any mention to “expect onshore winds”, you can assume that planes will be operating in reverse flow and taking off into the wind for safety reasons.
